Hello I have lived in Delaware since 2015 and work mostly remote but have to travel to Columbus two to three times a month and because of that I have to pay taxes in both cities. Our property tax has already gone up costing us an extra 2400 dollars a year as well as our HOA fees another 180 and now you want to take away the tax credit as well essentially increasing taxes. Why is there no consideration for making the credit lower instead of repealing it all together? It's bad enough that prices for everything have gone up. You are starting to price single income families out of homes with these continued taxes making it difficult to live here. We're talking a minimum of a 3000 increase before any other bills or expenses come up. There needs to be some other consideration for the tax credit other than simply being repealed.
